

Anthropic Academy, Skilljar, and partner counting

Session 2 of 12 · English notes

When someone asked for Udemy practice tests, Vijay shared anthropic.skilljar.com—Anthropic Academy. That portal is the self-paced curriculum, the place you register for the exam, and (for the company) the system that counts completions toward partner status. Mixing it up with UST Percipio is the most expensive administrative mistake in this chapter.

What Skilljar is for you as a candidate

Register and log in. Prefer your org identity if UST is paying and wants the completion to count. If the org is not issuing credentials yet, personal IDs can still take the free learning content—but partner counting and “high-end partner” maths only work when people sit under the company. Vijay estimated on the order of 19 courses in the catalogue in August 2026, with three to four self-paced courses typically lining up behind one exam path. Treat those counts as a snapshot.

- Academy content is how you learn Anthropic’s own jargon (he later used “harness” as an example of a Claude-specific term).
- You register for the exam from this portal; clearing it is what the partner programme cares about, not a Udemy badge.
- Course-completion certificates inside Academy or Percipio are not the same as passing Pearson.

Name on the portal versus name on the ID

Simi’s issue is the one every large employer hits: UST’s directory expands a name one way; passport/Aadhaar another; Pearson requires a match. You cannot freely edit the Claude/Skilljar legal name yourself. The org account holder / partnership manager must fix it, or confirm in writing whether a personal-ID exam can later be affiliated to UST. Vijay’s technical preference: sit under the UST ID. His practical advice: escalate early; do not discover the mismatch at the webcam check.

PARTNER PORTAL UI

Vijay showed a partner console (he referred to an “Euler” / partner app). Tiers and numeric thresholds below are his classroom sketch of how Anthropic counted enablement in August 2026. Confirm with UST’s Anthropic account team and current partner docs—not this page—before you quote numbers to a customer.

How partner counting was taught

The commercial plot: a services firm climbs partner tiers by proving people learned Claude and customers used it. Vijay walked a ladder. Exact labels (Registered / Select / Preferred / Global Premier) and thresholds should be verified; the shape is what you need pedagogically.

Stage (classroom language)	Learning / cert bar he described	Customer / story bar he described
Registered-style enablement	First ~10 users complete a minimum of ~4 Academy courses	Entry: people are actually studying under the org
Next tier (cert + customers)	Those first ~10 pass certification exams	Enable ~1–2 customers; public-ish customer stories
Preferred-scale	On the order of 100+ certified users	On the order of ~15 customers on Claude; more published stories
Global Premier-scale	On the order of 1,000 certified individuals	The “high-end partner” north star he quoted for UST-scale ambition

On 6 August he added an important correction: course-completion counting used to be the mandatory on-ramp to become a partner; if UST is already enrolled, individuals can go straight at certification. Skilljar remains the best glossary. You still want the courses; they are no longer the only gate he described for an already-onboarded partner.

Taking a cert with you

If you change employer, Vijay said there is provision to carry a personal certification and have an org enable it—talk to account holders. Do not assume a weekend personal Claude.ai login automatically credits UST’s 1,000-headcount goal.

Percipio is a different pile

HR L&D (Gowthami, 6 August) and Vijay aligned: Percipio is UST’s e-learning journey. Uploading a completion there satisfies an internal path. It has nothing to do with the Anthropic credential. The exam itself is a practical/proctored sitting (Pearson in the stories people told).

What to do this week on Academy

1. Log into anthropic.skilljar.com with the identity UST intends to count.
2. Check the display name against your exam ID; ticket the account team if they differ.
3. Enrol in the developer-path courses (Claude Code, MCP intro, APIs)—even if partner maths no longer blocks you.
4. Ignore Udemy unless you are filling a gap the official glossary does not cover, and even then verify against docs.claude.com.

Official documentation

- Anthropic Academy (Skilljar)

The URL Vijay put on screen: learning + exam registration.

- Claude Docs home

<https://docs.claude.com/en/home>

Pairs with Academy: same vendor, reference depth.

- MCP

<https://docs.claude.com/en/docs/agents-and-tools/mcp>

Example of an Academy course topic whose jargon appears on the exam.

- Claude Code overview

<https://code.claude.com/docs/en/overview>

Developer-path reading that Skilljar will echo.
